

Pig Veterinarians Needed

Scolexia Animal and Avian Health Consultancy are currently seeking a full-time veterinarian with Australian recognised qualifications (MRCVS) to join their business and live in the sun-kissed land Down Under.

The key aspect of the role will involve veterinary support to intensive animals (particularly pigs, poultry, ruminants, other terrestrial species and aquaculture).

The field of work is broad and incorporates intensive animal farms, commercial, government, regulatory, educational institutions and R & D. The veterinary team is supported by staff within the company with expertise in agricultural engineering, environmental science, construction projects and auditing, see www.scolexia.com.au.

It is preferable that applicants have some experience in pigs or poultry, but recent graduates will be given due consideration. Those applicants more focused on regulation, animal health policy and R&D will also be considered. The company provides extensive mentoring to new employees that want to progress their knowledge and experience base.

Whilst the companies head office is based in Melbourne, the role will involve routine interstate travel and offer scope for the successful applicant to reside elsewhere within Australia.

Remuneration will be commensurate with the applicant's level of experience.
